

New Tenure-Track Faculty

Jane Chang Mi, Assistant Professor of Media Studies, received her M.F.A. in Design | Media Arts from the University of California, Los Angeles and her M.S.E. in Ocean Resource Engineering from University of Hawai'i, Mānoa. As an artist and ocean engineer, Jane Chang Mi assesses the post-colonial ocean environment through interdisciplinary research. Mi most often focuses on the occupation and militarization of the Pacific Ocean by the United States. This interest emerges from her background as an ocean engineer, a field that is inextricably linked to the American military complex.

Aly Ogasian, Assistant Professor of Art + Design received her M.F.A. in Digital + Media from Rhode Island School of Design. She produces interdisciplinary artworks and public programs that explore the relationship between nature and technology.

Dr. Luis Salés received his Ph.D. in the history of Christianity from Fordham University. His teaching and research applies the analytical resources of mujerista, queer, feminist, and post-/decolonial theories to the study of premodern Christianity in east/north Africa, western/central Asia, and eastern Europe.
